Presenter Information: Brenda Nelson is uniquely qualified in the ARD/IEP process having first-hand experience advocating for her now 18-year-old son who began receiving special education services at the age of three with a diagnosis on the Autism Spectrum. Brenda has dedicated much of the past 15 years to helping other parents successfully navigate the special education process by providing training and one-on-one support, both professionally and as a volunteer. Her experience includes: developing and presenting training sessions for both parents and professionals; working in the special education department for a large school district; working for nonprofit parent support organizations; serving on the Special Education Advisory Board for a large school district; and organizing and managing a large special education conference for parents. Brenda is currently completing her Master's degree in Educational Human Resource Development with a specialization in Adult Education from Texas A&M University (expected completion date is May 2018).
